From the hills of North Carolina to the hills of Greece, Jo Nell Isley and her husband, S. W., launched themselves on their "trip of a lifetime." That's what they anticipated--and perhaps it was, but in a way quite the opposite of their dreams. Woven into Isley's account of her trip to the middle east and a hospitalization in Greece she could never have imagine in her worst nightmares, she comments on the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict and gives her take on troubled inter-religious relationships from the time of the Christian crusades to the present day. Balancing such issues are humorous anecdotes about her hospital stay---with her speaking only English and the doctors speaking only Greek--including a hilarious description of her light-hearted pretense of a being spy for Arafat got her the attention she need from the nurses ... then nearly got her thrown out of the hospital. A quick, entertaining read--both thought-provoking and fun.
